Yesterday Lieutenant Commanding Eastman, of the Yankee, accompanied by Dr. Moore and Engineer Carpenter, landed at Shipping Foint and proceeded to a hill half a mile from the river, where the celebrated rebel one hundred and twenty pounder was mounted. The party took with them slow matches, with the design of bursting the gun. They loaded it with a very large charge of powder and 'a shell. The slow match was lighted, leading to the vent, and the party betook themselves to a place of safety. The charge went off; but the gun did not explode. It was again loaded, and the supplementary shell placed under. neath the carriage. Dr. Moore retired to the covert of the woods, with the military, while Captain Eastman and Mr. Carpenter ran into a rathole, a place specially pro vided by the rebels for their own safety whenever they saw a Union sheil coming. GENERAL NEWS.

WASHINGTON, March 13, 1862. AFFAIRS ON THE VIRGINIA SIDE OF THE POTOMAC.
Accounts received to night from the Virginia side represent nothing of especial interest among our troops.

THE MOURNPUL HOWLINGS OF THE ABOLITIONISTS. The assaults of the radical faction in Congress and their howling after General McClellan, are producing a deep feeling of dissatisfaction. The army, officers and soldiers, almost idolize General McClellar. They deeply resent the attacks upon him, which they know are groundless and unjust. In fact, so much feeling is manifested on this subject throughout the army, that there is danger flerce and reckless partisan warfare upon the man who campaign have thus far resulted so gloriously for the re

Notwithstanding the sneers of the howling gentry at General McClellan for driving the rebel army away from Manassas without a battle, the result has only verified his own predictions, frequently expressed, that they would fall back from Manassas upon the approach of our army, in front or any attempt to turn that position, immediately upon the flank towards Richmond. It is but just to state that from the beginning of his command of the army the General-in-Chief has had but one plan for its prosecution; and up to this time that programme has been strictly carried out, and is intended to be executed, without any departure, until the capture of Richmond close the war for the Union.

This plan cannot, of course, be disclosed; but the retreat of the rebels from Manassas necessitates no alteration in it. Arrangements have already been made for the furious "on to Richmond" faction will afford them an opportunity to celebrate the restoration of Richmond to federal authority sooner than they conceive to be pos-

THE STEVENS BATTERY AND THE MAIL-CLAD GUN-

The House Committee on Naval Affairs was occupied today with an examination of the Steven's fron-clad naval battery. Prof. Henry and Mr. Livingstone appeared be-fore the committee, and exhibited a model of the battery, and explained its merits to the complete satisfaction of the committee, several of whom have expressed the opinion that the recont duel between the Merrimac and Monitor has entirely proved the correctness of the theory announced by Mr. Stevens, a quarter of a century ago.

Since Monday there has been a marked desire on the part of members of Congress to facilitate the construc-tion of none but iron-clad vessels of war. This battery has gained immense popularity. There is no doubt its completion, without delay, will be recommended by the naval committees of both houses. INCREASED RAILWAY FACILITIES BETWEEN NEW YORK AND THE CAPITAL. The report made from the Roads and Canals Comm to-day, accompanying the bill for increased railroad fa-cilities between New York and Washington, sets forth that the exigencies of the government require additiona and more speedy communication; that the line should be inland and safe from the dangers of foreign invasion, to which the shore line is everywhere exposed. The resolution expressing the thanks of Congress to Captain A. H. Foote, his officers and men, of the Western fiotilla, was taken up.

Mr. Geness, (rep.) of Iowa, said he felt it a duty and pleasure to call attention to the exploits of our navy in the Western waters. In May last Commander John Rodgers was sent to Cincinnati to prepare gunboats for operations in the Western waters. The Tyler, Lexington and Conestoga were built. When they first went to Cairo they were laughed at; but since that no rebol eraft has been above Columbus. Afterwards, in September, Captain Foote was sent to take the place of Rodgers, and the gunboats, partly iron clad, St. Louis, Carondelet, Pittsburg, Easex and Mound City, mounting thirteen guns each, were finished. So far as he (Mr. Grimes) could learn, the plan of turning the enemy's flank by going up the Tennessee and Cumberland rivers originated with Commander Foote. He referred at some length to the triumph of the gunboats at Foris Henry and Denelson, and attributed the avacuation of Columbus to the influence of the gunboats and mortar fleet. He contended that this country was destined to be a great maritime country, and the navy must be its right arm of defence, and referred to the gallant exploits of the navy elsewhere, under Dupont and Goldsborough. He said the recount event at Hampton. Roads demonstrated that ordinary wooden boats are no defence against iron boats, and that no stone fortress is any obstacle to the entrance of iron boats into any harbor. He referred in terms of high enloyy to Lieutenant Worden and Captain Ericsson, and to the lamented dead on the Congress and Cumberland.

The resolution was passed.

VOE OF THANKS TO LIEUTENART WORDEN, AND HIS OFFICERS AND MRS OF THE MAIL-CLAD STRAMER MONITOR.

The resolution of thanks to Lieutenant Worden and the officers and seamen of the Monitor was then taken up and passed.

Mr. Davis, (Union) of Ky., moved to take up the report of the Judiciary Committee on the case of Mr. Powell.

Motion agreed to by yeas 24, nays 16.

Mr. Davis proc etad to speak in favor of the resolution to expel. He said he favored the resolution from a sense of duty and from what he considered to be the instructions of the Kentucky Legislature, and his own judgment on the subject. He thouget his colleague had entirely misreprosented the views of the people of Kentucky, and that a majority of the people and of the Legislature desired his place to be vacated. He (Mr. Davis) came here determined, if possible, to carry out the will of the people in vacating the sent of his colleague. In the time of struggle and doubt in Kentucky, when it was doubtful whether she would turn robel or not, the whole influence of his colleague was thrown against the government and in favor of the rebellion. His colleague had endeavered by every means to indoctrinate the people of Kentucky with treason to the government. He referred to the States Rights Convention at Henderson, Kentucky, where Mr. Powel presided, and read the resolutions adopted by that meeting. He claimed that Jeff Davis m. & he colleague worked together to desiroy the government, and that secession alone was responsible for the war and the consequent burdens upon the people. His colleague took the position, then, that the independence of the secoled States must be recognized. This in itself is treasem. He referred to the record of Mr. Powell in his votes in the Senate. He had voted against the bill for the collection of the rawnue, against the atmission of the Virginia Senators, against the bill to increase the pay of solders and non-commissioned officers, and had presented a written protest avainst the bill to punish conspiracies—all these, in connection with Breckmirdge lent themselves. The neutrality of the Governor of Kentucky and of his colleague was opposition to the Union men of the States. Kentucky had then a traitor and robe in the executive chair; neutrality of the Governor of Kentucky and of his colleague was opposition to the United States; but that was not the neutrality of the Union men of that State. Kentucky had then a traitor and robel in the executive chair;
but that galiant State had nobly redeemed herself since then. He then referred to the Convention at Frankfort, at which Powell attended and drafted the resolutions, as a convention of "secoshers," under the name of peace.
He said he was for the expulsion of his colleague from no personal feeling or enmity of any kind, but from a cause of duty, as he thought all his votes and estions were against the government and in favor of secession.
Mr. Powall, (opp.) of Ky., said he which do make a 2nished.

Mr. Davis said be knew of no ruie by which his collegue could prescribe rules of debate. If he said anything to which he (Davis) wished to answer he should retain his right to reply.

Mr. Powatt said he intended to ask no favors of his collegue. He was his persecutor, and he had not intended to prescribe any rules.

The Senate then went into executive session, and subsecuently adjourned.

DISCUSSION OF THE TAX BILL.

The House, in Committee of the Whole, then resumed the consideration of the Tax bill.

imits of the United States, on which to colonize free blacks, and for the payment of the expenses of transportation thither.

Mr. Morrill, (rep.) of Vt., raised a point of order that this amendment was not germain to the first section of the bill, which provides for the appointment of all officers necessary to carry its provisions into effect.

The Chairman (Mr. Cellax) sustained the objection, at the same time saying that the debate must be confined to the special order

Mr. Richardson said the gentlemen from Kentucky (Mr. Wadsworth) and from Pennsylvania (Mr. Stevens) seemed to express some fears, because they have not sufficient confidence in the President, that the money proposed to be reach will be properly appropriated but the Chief Executive, in his opinion, had, by his public acts, shown a disposition cabide by the laws and upheld the constitution. While he differed from the President as to the best mode of doing other things, he in this accorded to him a perfect honesty of purpose.

Mr. Sirevske, (rep.) of Pa., rose to a coint of order, saying, "The acts of the administration are not pertinent to this bill."

Mr. Remandson desired to say to his friends on the other side that the gantieman from Kentucky (Mr. Wattsworth) was yesterday subject to the same interrentions that he (Mr. Richardson) had been to day. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. Bingharn), however, had not been so annoyed. He (Mr. Richardson) had no desire to discuss the tirst section of this bill, but he served notice of a six republican friends that he would bring them from day to day to the stret line of debate, and he would make them too it every hour. Mr. Richardson then resumed his seat.

Further Details of the Fight_Desparat Conflict-Particulars of the Battle, &c. SPRINGFFELD, Mo., March 11, 1862.

A messenger arrived at ten o'clock last night bringing dditional news of the battle. The engagement took place on Little Sugar Creek, when skirmish occurred on their march down.

In anticipation of an attack on the south side, General Curtis ordered the trains to be drawn up on the north side, but unexpectedly the attack was commenced on their rear, north of our army, by from 1,500 to 2,000 rebel cavalry.

General Sigol, with 800 men, protected the train, and for several hours alternated, retreating and stopping to hold the rebels in check, while the trains pushed backwards to the main bodies of the army. While thus en gaged General Sigel was three times surrounded, but cut his way through each time.

The principal fighting on Thursday was done by Gen. Sigel. In this way on Friday the engagement became general, and continued so throughout, the officers be-having with much gallantry. The most exposed position was occupied by Colonel Carey's division; and the greate: oss was sustained by them. Colonel Dodger's brigade, of this division, consisted of the Fourth Iowa regiment and the First Iowa battery; the Thirty-fifth Illinois, Colonel Phelps' regiment, and the Twenty-fourth Missouri.

The Second brigade, under Colonel Vandevere, of the Ninth Iowa, consisted of his own regiment, the Dubuque battery, and Col. Carey's regiment of cavalry. A letter Fram Colonel Carey says that the losses in the Fourth and Ninth Iowa, Thirtyfifth Illinois and Twentyfifth Missouri are from 150 to 200 in each regiment killed and wounded. Only 300 of the Twenty-fourth Missouri were present, but they lost 29 killed and a large numbe wounded. The Twelfth and Seventeenth Missouri, Third lows cavalry and Eighth Indiana lost about 46 each. Among the wounded are General Asboth, in the arm; Colonel Carr, also in the arm; Lieutenant Colonel Galligin, Lieuteaant Colonel Herron and Major Coyle, of the Ninth Iowa. Besides being wounded Colonel Herron was taken prisoner. Colonel Dodge had three horses shot under him. Lieutenant Smith, of the Second Ohio battery, who was taken prisoner, jumped from a wagon to make his escape, and was killed.

The robel officers killed and wounded are, Brigadier General McCullock, killed; Brigadier General Slack, dan-gerously wounded; Colonel McIntosh, killed; Colonel B. H. Rives, Second regiment Volunteers, dangerously wounded; Colonel Herbert, of the Third Louisiana, killed or dangerously wounded; Major General Sterling Price, slightly wounded.
